Internal CDC-GSU Seed Awards

FY17 Awards

CDC-GSU Seed Award provide support to collaborative social and behavioral science research projects within the field of public health that address public health priorities with large-scale impact on health, and with known, effective strategies to address them. There was 1 of these awarded in FY17.

- Eric Wright, Sociology, Understanding Sexual Behaviors to Prevent Multidrug-resistant Shigella Infections among Men who have Sex with Men

FY15 Awards

CDC-GSU Seed Award provide support to collaborative social and behavioral science research projects within the field of public health that address public health priorities with large-scale impact on health, and with known, effective strategies to address them. There were 2 of these awarded in FY15.

- Holley Wilkin, Communication, Individual Community Health in Low Income Neighborhoods: An Evaluation of Atlanta's Beltline Project
- Angela Snyder, Health Policy Center, Barriers to Evidence-based Behavioral Health Services for Young Children with ADHD

FY13 Awards

CDC-GSU Seed Award provide support to collaborative social and behavioral science research projects within the field of public health that address public health priorities with large-scale impact on health, and with known, effective strategies to address them. There were 3 of these awarded in FY13.

- Michael Metzler, Kinesiology & Health, Establishing a Comprehensive School Physical Activity Program
- Sarah Weigle, Applied Linguistics, Identifying and Reducing Linguistic Barriers to Comprehension Among Limited English Proficient Diabetes Patients in Health Care Interactions
- Lisa Casanova, Public Health, Communicating the Risks & Benefits of RAW Produce: Research with Consumers

FY10 Awards

CDC-GSU Seed Award provide support to collaborative social and behavioral science research projects within the field of public health that address public health priorities with large-scale impact on health, and with known, effective strategies to address them. There were 5 of these awarded in FY10.

- Yuki Fujioka, Communication, Examining the Influences of Social Media and Cultural Relevance on Health Among Underserved African American Audiences
- Gabriel Kuperminc, Psychology, Promoting Positive Youth Development to Prevent Teen Pregnancy and Sexual Risk Behaviors
- Dominic Parrott, Psychology, Informing Bystander Prevention Strategies by Examining the Effects of Alcohol
- Christine Stauber, Public Health, Evaluation of Education through Listening to promote the adoption of safe household water treatment behavior in communities in Western Kenya

FY08 Awards

CDC-GSU Seed Award provide support to collaborative social and behavioral science research projects within the field of public health that address public health priorities with large-scale impact on health, and with known, effective strategies to address them. There were 3 of these awarded in FY08.

- Marise Parent, Neuroscience, The Effects of a High Fructose Diet on Brain and Behavior
- Page Anderson, Psychology, Preventing Child Maltreatment in the Wake of Disaster: What Do States Do?
- Diana Robins, Psychology, Record Review Versus Direct Screening in Identifying Young Children With an Autism Spectrum Disorder

FY06 Awards

CDC-GSU Seed Award provide support to collaborative social and behavioral science research projects within the field of public health that address public health priorities with large-scale impact on health, and with known, effective strategies to address them. There were 5 of these awarded in FY06.

- Guantao Chen, Nutrition, Assessment of Environmental Health Specialists' Restaurant Inspection and Foodborne Illness Outbreak Investigation Practices
- Mildred Cody and Karen Gieseker, Public Health, Sustainability Assessment of Community-based Interventions in Northwestern Tanzania
- Marci Culley, Psychology, The Use of Case Study Analysis to Develop an Analytic Framework for Community Interventions Around Naturally Occurring Asbestos
- James Emshoff, Psychology, Pilot Projects to Promote Scientific Advances in New Settings: The Dissemination and Implementation of Mentoring Strategies to Reduce Sexual Violence